312/general

October 28, 1922. Continuing on the above matter, Operative as per instructions proceeded to New Brunswick, N.J., and there secured a furnished room at #133 Church St., New Brunswick, N.J.

Operative strolled about Town all during the day and until 10.05 p.m. mingling with the general clusters of people, and gather information and other remarks available.

While in the vicinity of the Telegraph Office, Operative noticed several reporters talking very excitedly. It seems that one of them had been trying to get Mrs. Gibson on the telephone. Operative heard one of the reporters to remark, "She's gone, she's beat it." Following this remark, several of the reporters rushed out of the Telegraph Office, stating, "Let's go up there and see her." Whereupon several of the reporters entered an automobile and drove off in the direction of Mrs. Gibson's home.

When the above mentioned car returned to the Telegraph Office, one of it's occupants was heard to remark, "She must have left as we did not see her up there." Three of the reporters then left the automobile and proceeded to the telephone booth at the railroad station. One of the reporters entered the above described telephone booth - After a short time he came out and stated that a woman had answered the wire and that this woman had said that Mrs. Gibson had left for Philadelphia. After waiting a short time, one of the reporters again entered the telephone booth and called up Mrs. Gibson's home, this time a reply came over the telephone that Mrs. Gibson had come back, that she was home again. After waiting a short time again, one of the reporters then again called up Mrs. Gibson's home on the wire, and was again advised that Mrs. Gibson was not at home.

At about 10.15 p.m. while at the railroad station, Operative upon signal from Mr. DeM. boarded a train for New York City.
